

The California Agricultural Heritage Club recognizes those who have maintained financial responsibility in California agriculture for 100 years or longer.

More than 400 commodity crops are grown across California, including fruits, vegetables, and nuts.

California's average farm size is 328 acres, while the average farm size in the United States is 434 acres.

There are over 77,000 farms and ranches in California.